

8. N4 Ranch

Dirk Neill – Dirk is the owner and operator of N4 Ranch, located approx. 30 minutes east of Saskatoon, SK. In addition to managing ranch operations, Dirk actively competes in firefighting and Emergency Response Team (ERT) competitions, showcasing his dedication to both physical fitness and team-based challenges. Trust me, you'll hear him out there cheering everyone on.

Buzz Gareau – Buzz is an accomplished horse trainer based in Miry Creek, SK, where he operates out of the renowned Y Knot Ranch. He specializes in training a diverse range of equine disciplines, from versatile ranch horses to competitive cow horses. He is an active participant in the working cow horse circuit and is well-regarded within that community. Buzz shares the ranch with his fiancé, Michelle, and together they dedicate their days to refining horsemanship and immersing themselves in the stunning natural beauty that surrounds their property.

Riley Isaacson – Riley owns and operates R5 Ranch, a 3000 purebred black angus cow/calf operation. Riley is the quiet one that doesn't need to speak to be heard. He reads cows like a border collie. Riley is always the guy to call when you know the job has to get done – there's no quit in him. Riley, the brute force on the team, and we plan to continue using his size to the team's advantage.

Kayo Toves – Kayo is the proud owner of Broken Feather Ranch, a respected horse training facility known for its excellence across a wide range of equine disciplines. With years of experience competing in ranch rodeos and cow horse events, Kayo has consistently demonstrated exceptional skill and dedication to the craft. His commitment to quality training has earned him numerous accolades, including multiple Top Hand awards, testament to his leadership and expertise in the field. Around the ranch, he's affectionately known as "General Toves", a nickname that reflects both his commanding presence and unwavering passion for horsemanship.
