Attended site. Investigate parkbreak fault.
Trying to move the machine, folded back and noticed the park rake would not release.
Investigated the foot park brake. Dismantled the protective cover to find the potentiometer, visual inspection looked okay tested and noticed no voltage.
Inspected the faults present in the machine and noticed within looking at the schematics. There was a common fuse controlling the senses.
Opened up the housing where the electrical board was and noticed fuse 14 was blown. Isolated and replaced fuse.
Turn the machine onto test and noticed more faults present and the fuse 14 had blown again

Trace short circuit in wiring loom.
Removed melted supply and earth cables and replaced with new, started to replace panels and require a new fuse holder to continue
Machine had smoldered a lot of its harness due to a dead short, towed machine to wash bay and washed all dry powder residue off, removed right wheel and most panels to assess damage, found the main earth cables and power/earth supply to electrical box had all melted significantly. disconnected all supplies and spent hours testing for dead short disconnecting individual plugs on affected circuits. Found the main harness to machine control from electrical box had been impaled by part of the machine chassis, upon inspection found that 30% of the wires within this harness were melted together, striped back conduit and splice repaired all effected cables, tested machine and ran without any faults.

Diagnose fault with brake accumulator not building pressure.
