Cause	Checked for codes and found B1B44:14-PAM-right rear outer sensor. The rear bumper is full of mud so I removed the rear bumper so I could clean it out. Cleaned all the mud out and then inspected the sensor and wiring for the right outer sensor. Tested circuits LMP07, VMP17 and RMP07 for continuity between C4011 and C421. Found high resistance in circuit VMP17. Inspected the wiring and found damage to the wire aprx 18inches from C4011.	Request Sub-total		125.71
Correction	Repaired damaged circuit and then checked its resistance again. Now have 0 omhs. Re-installed the rear bumper. When installing I adjusted the rear mounting brackets to straighten out the rear bumper so it wasnt bent up anymore. Once installed I checked the operation of the rear park aide. Working correctly now.

Cause Verified noise. Is loudest when going over bumps while turning. Seems to be from the driver front corner. Rotational type noise when fully cranked to the left. Listened on hoist but wasnt able to recreate the noise like what was heard when on my roadtest. Inspected the front end thoroughly and the only thing I could find is play in the front pinion up and down at the flange. Suspect noise is from the front differential. Created estiamte to replace the front pinion and carrier side bearings.

Correction Removed the front diff cover to inspect oil. Found oil has a lot of metal in it. Removed the front axles and then removed the carrier assembly. Verified bearings all have excess wear on them. Removed the pinion and the pinion bearings. Removed the bearing cones and the oil baffle. Installed new bearing cones and a new oil baffle. Removed the carrier side bearings and installed new ones. Installed new pinion bearings. Installed the pinion with a new crush sleeve, oil slinger and nut. Installed a new pinion seal. Installed flange with a new nut. Had to build a tool to hold the flange from spinning when tightening the nut to set the pinion preload. Tightened nut and got preload to 24 inch pounds. Spec is 16-32 inch pounds. Installed the carrier assembly and then checked backlash and pattern. Both are good. Installed the diff cover and then installed both front halfshats with new vacuum seals. Filled diff with new fluid. Took for a roadtest and listened for any noise from the front end. Noise is gone now.
